

A topic that I would have no problem giving my personal opinion about! To receive 5 soliciting calls a day is consider "a good day" on average it has been 8-10 calls a day. When you live with 6 roommates at college and the phone is ringing anyways from friends, solicitors drive you crazy. The level of respect has been pushed to the edge from the soliciting these days and from what I have seen they have done them selves over and soliciting is a dieing marketing idea. The FCC needs to make this more apparent to the consumers and inform them on options to block the "virus" of the phone.
